Hip-hop for the whole family - not a joke, but a serious concern of one of the most most versatile human child in this country. BÜRGER LARS DIETRICH is predestined for this task in many ways.

predestined for this task in many ways: he is a comedian, singer, speaker, entertainer anyway, known for hits such as "Sexy Eis" or "Ein Bett im Kornfeld", popular Kika presenter through the last twelve seasons of "Dein Song", recent Grimme award winner in the "Children & Youth" category and a real B-Boy who has been writing rhymes and writing rhymes and practicing breakdancing since the age of eleven. Now it was time again for a new album - and the families of this country will thank him for it.

"I really wanted to make hip-hop again," says BÜRGER LARS DIETRICH. The 16 tracks on his album "Menschenskind" (release date: 25.09.20) cover a wide range of genres from reggae, trap and disco grooves to classic samples and swing rhythms.

rhythms. As versatile as it is always funny and clearly positive, it's all about annoying neighbors ("Queen of the Night"), unpleasant parents ("Mom sooo embarrassing") or the cool "Yodeling grandpa", dancing in the rain or the 'rap chicken' (rapped together with Grimme Prize partner Marti Fischer). With "Le Le Le" or - more than just a side dish - "Schnauze full", he delivers catchy tunes as the auto-tuned 'Capital Lars', which annoy everyone until until they simply have to sing along. The fact that the now fully bearded Mr. Dietrich, despite a few grey hairs and nurtures the child in his manhood, the self-deprecating father-son question-and-answer game of "Du warst ganz genauso", the well-worn "Schonung", which turns into a superhero the anti-bullying song "Sometimes", which is wrapped up in a superhero-as-best-friends fantasy and, of course, the title track, a self-confident generational anthem with a sample of the GDR comedy duo "Herricht & Preil", are clear.

"A lot comes from the heart and from the gut too" says BÜRGER LARS DIETRICH about his new album.
