Belgian singer-songwriter brings current album 'Nice To Meet You' (2022) to the stage!

What began in 2007 with global hits such as "You Don't Know" or his acoustic cover version of 50

Cents "Ayo Technology" has long since become an international success story

! Hardly anyone manages to transform highly personal themes into universal anthems as skilfully as the Belgian singer-songwriter Milow.

As catchy and popular as his songs may be, they are never shallow. For his seventh album "Nice To Meet You" (2022), Milow took a deep dive into himself. The result of this introspective journey could clearly be heard in the first single "How Love Works": "The track marks the end of an unforgettable journey. I tried to dig deeper and make my music even more personal. The song is my way of reimagining myself."

With his sixth LP "Lean Into Me", Milow opened another chapter in 2019, which shows no signs of tiring. Because despite all the international success that the likeable guitarist and singer has enjoyed with his seven released studio albums to date, countless awards, sold-out tours and around 200 million global streams, direct contact with his audience was and is sacred to him - and not just on the concert stage. In 2019,
